ILTS SUPPORT PROSPECTUS

Who We Are

The International Liver Transplantation Society is a nonprofit scientific organization whose mission is to promote and disseminate multidisciplinary scientific advances in liver transplantation worldwide. We invite you to partner with ILTS to help us fulfill our mission and implement new programs and continue to provide highly valued meetings and opportunities for our members.

Why Support ILTS

The society was organized in 1990 and we currently have 1000 international members. The members are physicians, surgeons, anesthesiologists, and allied health professionals engaged in the field of liver transplantation. By supporting ILTS you will gain visibility and face to face contact with the world leaders in liver transplantation in an intimate setting. Typically our Congress attracts 1500 attendees.

Strategic Goals

Research: To promote clinical and basic inquiry to improve liver transplantation worldwide. The newly designed ILTS website will have specialty sections on Anesthesia/Critical Care Medicine, Surgery and Hepatology and will feature papers, presentations and webcasts of current research.

Education: Provide the highest quality education for those in liver transplantation, including mentorship opportunities. ILTS offers a scholarship which enables young investigators to foster international collaboration for the advancement of the field of liver transplantation. In addition, we provide educational programs in countries with developing transplant programs. In the fall 2009, ILTS will host Innovations in Liver Transplantation: An International Effort in Beijing, China.

In 2009, we formed a Vanguard Committee of younger ILTS members whose purpose is to engage younger surgeons, physicians and scientists with an interest in liver transplantation. The initial charge of the Vanguard Committee will be to develop scientific and educational initiatives to prepare the next generation for leadership roles in the society

Partnership: Increase opportunities to build strategic alliances with related scientific organizations and industry partners. Two years ago we began a lectureship program to provide speakers to transplant society meetings in developing countries. In 2009 we provided speakers to the Indian National Association for the Study of Liver (INASL) meeting and to the National Update on Liver Transplantation also held in India.

Clinical Leadership: Increase visibility of ILTS issues by lending expertise to endeavors aimed at building consensus such as guidelines, criteria and outcome measures. The supplement on the Renal Insufficiency Consensus Conference held in 2008 will be available in mid-2009. We are also collaborating with other organizations to develop a Consensus Conference on HCC and Liver Transplantation in Zurich in 2010.

Collaborations

ILTS partners with several organizations to advance the field of liver transplantation:

- ASA - American Society of Anesthesiology
- AASLD - American Association for the Study of Liver Disease
- AST - American Society of Transplantation
- ASTS - American Society of Transplant Surgeons
- EHPBA- European Hepato Pancreato Biliary Association
- ELITA - European Liver Transplant Association
- IPTA- International Pediatric Transplantation Association
- INASL- Indian National Association for the Study of Liver
- LICAGE - Liver Intensive Care Group of Europe

Why Partner with ILTS

- Close contact with opinion leaders in the field
- Receive priority and visibility at the foremost meeting specifically related to liver transplantation
- Opportunity to interact and play a role in the future of the field
- Opportunities to promote your company
- Introduce new products and services to key clinicians and scientists

OPPORTUNITIES TO SUPPORT EDUCATIONAL INITIATIVES

Perioperative Care in Liver Transplantation (Multiple Sponsors)

This one-day course held each October is during the American Society of Anesthesia annual meeting. The theme of the course varies each year, but past topics include issues in critical care medicine, case presentations, donation after cardiac death, and hepatitis C.

Research Scholarship ($20,000)

This award provides money for travel and training in liver transplantation. The award helps fund the recipient for training in liver transplantation (either transplant hepatology or transplant surgery, anesthesia/critical care, or basic science) under the tutelage of an ILTS member. The goal is to encourage a career in academic liver transplantation.

Lectureship in Emerging Countries (Multiple Sponsors)

This ILTS initiative helps fund ILTS lectureships to official transplant meetings in countries where liver transplantation programs are being developed.

The first recipients in 2008 were the Pan Arab Congress in Amman, Jordan, and the Brazilian Congress of Liver, Pancreas, and Intestine Transplantation in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

In 2009 we sponsored a one day program in Delhi, India as part of the Indian National Society of the Study of Liver Disease annual meeting.
